

I have become increasingly unhappy with the trends in corporate ownership of broadcasting outlets. The current issue of the campaign film that Sinclair Broadcasting is urging stations to run confirms my sense that corporate ownership and money interests are exerting an unhealthy degree of control over the opinions expressed on radio and television. I urge the FCC to consider this effect and to reconsider the rules governing station ownership.